Today we will be beginning a series of four messages called "Meditative Encouragements". The plan is to look at four separate Psalms that deal with our own states and the state of the world around us. When we talk about everything going on in our present world, it's easy to get discouraged. But these Psalms help give us an eternal perspective that motivates us despite the chaos all around.

We love to categorize people. Are you an IU fan or a Purdue fan? Are you a Republican or Democrat? Conservative or Liberal? Black or White? Cats or Dogs? Middle Class or Poor? Baptist or Methodist? Ally or Enemy? Ford or Chevy? Southern or Yankee? Perhaps doing so helps us feel as if we understand people and where they are in life. Whatever categories we may see, whether they are helpful or not, right or wrong, at the end of the day, there is only one category that ultimately makes a difference. That's because it is the category that God Himself sets and one He expects us to be on the correct side of. Today in Psalm 1, we will learn about this most important category and how it all goes back to what kind of person each of us chooses to be.
