Nathan's Notes...

I thoroughly enjoyed last week's Thanksgiving meal. The food was great, but even better was the fellowship we could enjoy as a church family. As I walked through the basement watching people feast, smile, laugh, meet newcomers, and get to know each other better, I thought that this must have been a small, imperfect picture of our heavenly home that God has planned for us.

Today is another family Sunday, meaning that many of the kids will be joining us for worship. I always love these days because it's a great chance for young ones to witness their parents worshipping and living out the communal faith we hold to. It's also a day that we will be discussing another spiritual gift mentioned in the Bible: faith. 1 Corinthians 12:8 speaks of this. We don't often think of faith as a gift since it's something that, by definition, all Christians have. But like many of the other gifts we've discussed, we see that, while all Christians may be called to something, some seem to excel in it. When we look around, we see that there are those in faith who have an incredible confidence, courage, and vision for the future God is preparing and, as a result, accomplish great things for Him and set great examples for the rest of us.
