Nathan's Notes...

Happy Easter! This holiday has been called "the holiest day of the Christian calendar" because the event it commemorates is so central to our faith. It's today that we celebrate the resurrection of Jesus after His crucifixion. In a way, for the Christian, every day should be a celebration of the resurrection. But today is the day on the calendar that we commemorate this historic happening.

It's a historic day, not just because we celebrate the event that originally took place then, but also because of how much changed after that day. After Jesus rose from the dead, nothing was ever the same again. Heaven and earth had entered a new era, one in which the old order was beginning to pass away.
