Nathan's Notes...

For those that have not heard, we have pushed back the date for our annual congregational meeting because of the threat of inclement weather. While we hope to have the meeting in January of every year, we will have to move it back to February 8th this year. But I look forward to seeing everyone then and taking some time together to look at some important business matters as well as to discuss our teaching focus for 2026.

Today we will be looking at one of my favorite psalms in the Bible. Psalm 37 is one that you often hear quoted in small sections across sermons, Bible studies, reference material, and devotion books, but it is not something that is often looked at in larger context. It seems especially valuable for our day and age as it is all about keeping oneself calm in the midst of chaos. We live in a world that has (and always has had) a lot of evil in it. It can be exhausting, exasperating, and even make us want to despair at times. But when we have the proper understanding of how this world works and the God Who watches over it, those frustrations are much easier to deal with.
